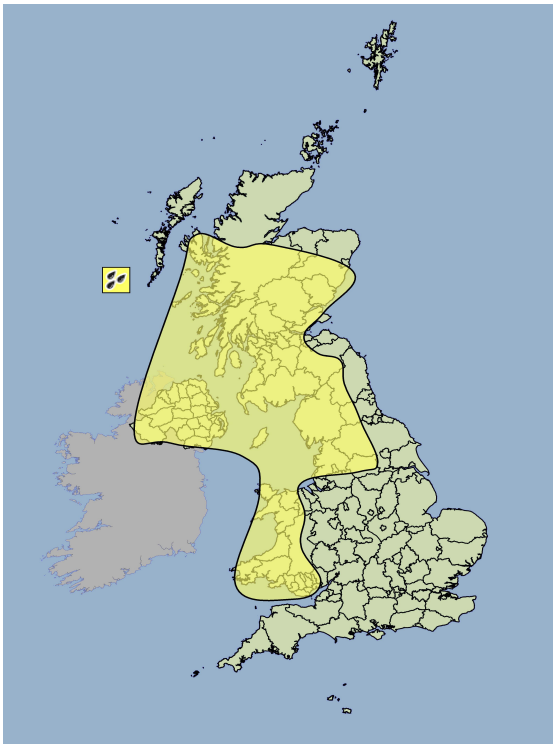
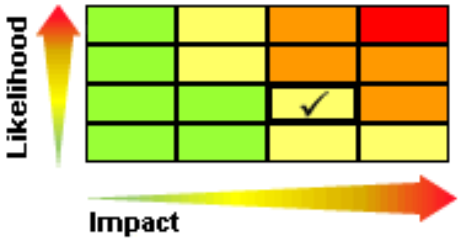
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold front is likely to become slow-moving over western Britain during Tuesday night and Wednesday, with an associated strong, moist southwesterly airflow. Rainfall accumulations through this period are expected to be widely 20-40 mm, with 60 mm or more over some higher ground. The very wettest areas include parts of southern and central Scotland along with Cumbria, with over 140 mm possible in places; separate amber warnings cover these higher risk areas.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Alert of Rain

Valid from 00:15 on Wed, 30th Dec 2015 until 23:45 on Wed, 30th Dec 2015

Rain, heavy at times and often prolonged, will affect many parts of western and northern Britain during Wednesday. Rain will be heaviest and most persistent over higher ground.

Please be aware of the potential for moderate levels of disruption in places from both surface water and river flooding. Please also refer to the associated amber alerts covering parts of Scotland and Cumbria.

This alert will be updated again on Tuesday morning.
